LOCAL HISTORY.

A Bethel Juvenile Editor and Business Partner.

Incidental Memorandum—By Leonard B. Chapman. Number 29.

Henry Leland and Charles Jarvis Chapman were cousins, and born on Bethel Hill. Henry Leland was a son of Deacon Elbridge Chapman and Charles Jarvis a son of Hon. Robert Andrews Chapman, and grandchildren of Eliphaz Chapman Jr. of Gilead, who was a son of Rev. Eliphaz, the first of the name who settled upon the northerly side of the Androscoggin river in Bethel. Rev. Eliphaz was of the fifth generation in descent from Edward Chapman, miller and farmer, who appears on record in Ipswich, Mass., in 1643, as a real estate owner, who married in the month of March, 1642, at Rowley, Mass., Mary Symonds, by whom he had five children. The descent of the Bethel branch of the name appears on page 180 of the Thurston Genealogy, edition of 1902, compiled by Dea. Brown Thurston of Portland.

In 1878, Dr. William B. Lapham and others issued a pamphlet of thirty-four pages relating to the Chapman family, but the work contains only a small part of the very many names and record of family incidents since collected.

The History of Bethel contains nine pages of names, but very many omissions appear, which is generally the case in all genealogical works.

IN MEMORIAM.

WILLIAM OLIVER STRAW.

The sad announcement of last week that our respected and widely-trusted citizen, the loyal friend, affectionate relative, and above all, the devoted husband, had closed his kindly eyes upon things of earth, transformed our village into a band of mourners.

Lips trembled, as faltering words voiced the irreparable loss. Eyes unused to tears were frankly wet; young and old looked their sorrow that this friend of us all was to be missed through so many channels of loss. The whole village was weighted with a feeling of desolation. That one modest, unassuming, quiet-voiced man could leave such a sense of bereavement among all classes calls for a recognition of the qualities that endure.

William Oliver Straw was born in Guilford, Maine, July 10th, 1841.

His father and mother were both fine representatives of old New England families. After completing the educational courses in the grammar and high schools, and upon attaining his majority, he engaged in stock growing.

In Nov. 1862 he was married to Miss Agnes Hastings, the only daughter of an old and influential family of Bethel. In 1885 Mr. and Mrs. Straw went to Montana, and there he became an unusually successful ranch owner, and was highly valued as a progressive and liberal citizen.

But the hills of Maine, with their early associations, called irresistibly, and six years ago the homes of Bethel opened wide doors to receive back this husband and wife, whose inseparable lives linked them as one in the hearts of their friends.

Since then how many generous and helpful associations have grouped themselves around their stately home, which has grown in beauty and charm, year by year. How many interests have been generously, wisely, and faithfully served by this rarely united husband and wife!

Their church, the Library, the Academy together with the many local needs and charities, have all felt the force of their lives as they have unitedly worked for the best good of the best causes.

No one entered that home without receiving so gracious a greeting that old friends and new ones instantly felt the sincerity and warmth that can only come from hearts at leisure from themselves.

But all through the last year those who loved him best were conscious of a change in his physical condition. No word of complaint, no rebellious murmur, and no lack of the tenderest consideration for others betrayed what he knew he was consciously fading.

The appealing look in those expressive eyes, the clinging hand-clasp, the pathetic tones in the voice, now tell us that he was passing through the lonely experience of weaning himself from earth. Who can overestimate the unselfishness and courage that upheld his spirit through those weary months of physical misery, borne without one betrayal of feeling. Never willing to refuse to see the little children who begged permission to visit him, and always ready with words of gratitude for the slightest courtesy or attention shown him, his tender solicitude for the comfort of his wife was expressed even close to Death's portal.

When the brave heart ceased to beat, we who loved him could say: "He bore his cross! Not in rebellion, nor in sullen submission, but with a loving patience (which made that sacred symbol which hung above his casket seem a fitting floral emblem), did that uncomplaining man accept the will of his God."

The wealth of exquisite flowers that came as messengers of sympathy and love, were wonderful in their perfection. They came from the Congregational church, the Congregational Club, from the Masons and the Eastern Star, as well as countless blossoms from personal friends, and formed a background of rare beauty as he lay in loving state in his home. The impressive burial service of the Masons at the home and at the flower strewn grave, lent the solemn dignity of a ceremonial to the hour.

There were loving words from his pastor, whose personal love showed itself by the most fitting and comforting words of appreciation and sympathy.

It must have been of such a man as our friend, that Wordsworth wrote: "That best portion of a good man's life—
His nameless unremembered acts
Of kindness and of love."

Mr. Straw's best legacy to this village lies in the quality of his heart-life. He loved, and will therefore forever live among us.

For "Whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away," but Love faileth never.

CAMP FIRE AT NORTH WATERFORD.

Members of W. R. C. and G. A. R. of Bethel Attend.

On Saturday morning at 8:45 o'clock, eighteen members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. of Bethel, started for North Waterford by teams to accept an invitation from G. M. Knight Corps to a camp fire. The ride was a pleasant one and the party arrived at North Waterford at about eleven o'clock, where they were cordially greeted at the Congregational vestry by the president of the corps, Mrs. Black, and other members.

At twelve o'clock the guests and members of Knight Corps sat down to a bountiful repast. The tables were indeed loaded and as for variety and delectableness, the dinner could not be surpassed. The guests needed no appetizer to assist them in doing justice to the dinner.

Members from several different posts were present. In the afternoon an interesting and well rendered program was given by Knight Corps and several numbers by children. The motion song, "Salute the Flag" by three children, and the duet, deserve special mention. There were also war songs and recitations by corps members. Representatives from the different posts were called upon for remarks.

The camp fire ended with three cheers for Knight Corps, the royal entertainers, and the party started home, arriving about 6 p. m.

RED, WHITE AND BLUE SALE, BETHEL.

Supper will be served at 6:15, consisting of cold meats, hot mashed potatoes and vegetables, bread, cakes, pies, and all the other good things that make as excellent a supper as those served in the past.

Thanking the public for its liberal patronage on former occasions, we solicit a continuance of the same.

RUMFORD MEN'S BIBLE CLASS

Have Important Business Meeting and Social.

The Men's Bible Class of the Methodist church, held an important business meeting, followed by an informal social hour, Wednesday evening, Nov. 3rd, in the church parlors. The most important item of business which was discussed, was a change in the hour for the class sessions, which have always been held at 11:45 a. m., Sundays, the same time as the regular Sunday School meeting.

The extraordinary growth of the class in membership and attendance, has made the present quarters unsuitable for the weekly sessions. It was decided on Wednesday evening to recommend to the class that the Sunday sessions be changed to 9:30 a. m. so that the class might meet in the vestry of the church. This recommendation was adopted at the regular class meeting last Sunday and will go into effect this coming week, Sunday, Nov. 14th, when the class will meet for the first time at the new hour, 9:30 a. m. All men over seventeen years of age are welcome to these sessions, where fellowship prevails and where discussion is open to all.

This is a Bible class that is vastly different from the usual conception of such an institution and it merits the attention and interest of men of all classes and creeds. The special class features which appeal to men are: separate class room, with free general discussion of lessons, but no personal questions asked by the teacher; (2) Management of class affairs by regularly elected officers and committees; (3) Strictly non-sectarian teaching of the facts and truths of the lessons studied; (4) Frequent social gatherings and lectures and an annual banquet.

The officers of the class for the present year, which expires in January, are Fred J. Latham, President; William W. Payne, Vice President; Earl Richardson, Secretary; Virgil Abbott, Treasurer. Gaylord W. Douglass, principal of the Rumford High school, is the regularly elected teacher of the class. The chairmen of the standing committees of the class are as follows: Membership, Perry Lapham; Devotional, Thomas F. Kendall; Social, Charles S. Preble; Visitation, Fred J. Strasburg.

There are now fifty-one resident active members of the class, and fourteen non-resident members, who keep in touch with the organization. The total attendance for the month of October, was one hundred and sixty-two.

VERDICT IS SUSTAINED.

Law Court Upholds Verdict Against Oxford Paper Co.

Justice Peabody has handed down a rescript in the case of Walcon Waiczenko vs. Oxford Paper Co., in which the verdict for the plaintiff, of $1,050 is ordered to stand. The case was tried before the Supreme Court at Auburn during the January term, 1909, and was argued before the Law Court at the June term. McGillicuddy & Morey appeared as council for the plaintiff and ~~Oakes,~~ Pulsifier & Ludden for the defense.

Walczenko was 19 years old, could speak no English, and while obeying the wishes of the foreman in his room, made known to him by signs, he accidently fell into one of the vats of boiling pulp and was so burned that he died from the injuries received. He had been employed in the mill but a few days and it was the claim of the plaintiff that he was not sufficiently acquainted with the dangers of the position to have been ordered to do the work he was attempting to do when the accident occurred. The full text of the rescript is as follows:

"This was an action brought by the administrator of John Walczenko, deceased intestate, to recover damages for injuries received by the deceased while employed by the defendant.

"The verdict was for the plaintiff for $1,050.

"It is before the law court on the defendant's general motion for a new trial on exceptions.

"The specific cause of action is in substance that the deceased, while employed in the defendant's mill, and acting under the direction of a foreman in charge of a room known as the 'wash room,' was precipitated into a vat containing hot pulp and water and was burned and scalded, and died as the result of his injuries.

There were certain machinery and appliances in the mill among which were four large wooden tanks or vats close to each other, projecting about three feet above the floor of the room and covering the space between the vats; on a level with their tops was a metal platform without railings, and between the vats above them and the platform was a rotary blow pipe about three feet in diameter, with the nozzle curved in such a way as to empty its contents, consisting of hot pulp into each of the vats. The nozzle of the pipe was ordinarily moved by a rope attached and pulled by men from the floor of the room.

Under the direction of his superior in charge of the room, the deceased was attempting to turn its nozzle by pushing it on the platform, when it suddenly discharged its contents and becoming light gave way from the force he was applying.

Two questions are raised by the exceptions to the ruling of the Justice, viz:

MRS. KELLOGG IN BETHEL.

Jeannette Jewell Kellogg, reader and impersonator, of Buffalo, N. Y., will appear in Odeon Hall, Bethel, November 19th, under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. The following are clippings taken from different papers:

Mrs. Jeannette Jewell Kellogg, the reader, who rendered a program at the First Methodist church, Friday evening before a most appreciative audience, did not fail to meet the expectation of the audience. Her voice was a mellow, musical one, with a magnetic vibration, which thrilled and commanded the sympathy of the entire audience. The selections she rendered were all by the favorite poets and authors. Very little of the dramatic was introduced, the reading consisting for the most part of humorous poetry, by Eugene Field and others. One or two rather pathetic stories in prose, told in Mrs. Kellogg's delightfully charming manner, caused the listener to almost forget his presence in the auditorium, and feel himself a silent character in the story.—Mt. Vernon, Ind., Evening Sun, Dec. 12, 1908.

One of the most entertaining and interesting features of the entertainment at the Lyceum last evening, were the readings of Mrs. Jeannette Jewell Kellogg. She has marvelous power of expression and adaptability, being equally at ease in comedy, tragedy and the melodramatic. Her character sketches were perfectly executed.—Bradford, Pa. Star.

MISS FRANCES ADAMS, REVIVALIST, IN BETHEL.

Large and Interested Audiences.

Miss Frances Adams who is doing a large work as an evangelist is now holding a series of meetings at the M. E. church. Last Sunday evening she spoke to a full house and each evening the attendance is good.

Miss Adams is an interesting speaker and it is hoped that her influence will be far reaching. Mrs. C. L. Banghart is chorister and soloist, the Chapman and Alexander hymns being used.

MT. ZIRCON CHAPTER O. E. S. ENTERTAINS.

The meeting of the Mt. Zircon Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star of Rumford, Tuesday evening proved a very pleasant event to all present. The members and their husbands assemble at the Masonic Hall a little after 6:30 and enjoyed a picnic supper and social time until the hour of the regular meeting arrived. During the meeting several candidates were initiated into the order. After this a fine musical program was given and Worthy Matron Mrs. Emma Howe presented to Mrs. William Britton an Eastern Star pin, a gift from the members of the Order. Mrs. Howe's presentation speech was in rhyme and was as follows:

May I speak just a word from one and all
Of the members of "Our Star" at Masonic hall,
To Sister Britton, who is soon to depart,
Brings a feeling of regret from every heart.
Yet we are glad that prosperity has caused the change,
And a member of our beloved Order, she still remains.
As one of my officers, she is always true blue,
As she calls on the telephone, "Mrs. Howe is this you?"
Have we work tonight? However ill I feel
You can look for me, I'll work with zeal.
This year, then the Lodge can find
Somebody else, if they don't mind."
How little we thought her words would prove true,
Let us profit by her life and each of us do
Our duty, as lovingly and willingly as she,
And our life will be full of sunshine, we all will see.
From the members, officers and guests we give this Star,
May its rays shine brightly over you however far you are,
Will you often think kindly of us way up in Maine,
And a member of Mt. Zircon still remain.

A GRATEFUL RECOGNITION.

For the written and spoken words of sympathy in my great loss; for handclasps and tear-wet-eyes; for tender remembrances of my husband's loving deeds; for the wealth of beautiful flowers; for all that has so lovingly been done to lighten the heavy burden laid upon me—my sincere and grateful thanks are extended to friends far and near.

AGNES HASTINGS STRAW.

Drawing the Line.

"In making campaign speeches," said the ordinary citizen, "I suppose you never promise more than you can do?"

"Oh, I don't carry it quite that far," replied the politician, "but I never promise more than I can make the people believe I can do."

Down to His Neck.

"I wish I could find a hat that would cover the bald spot on the back of my head."

"Turn round and let me see how far down your bald spot extends. Umph! You'd better try a fireman's helmet."

Where the Finest Flour is Made

"The bread-making qualities of flour are due entirely to the kind of wheat. Nature gives to wheat, and flour, all the strength they possess."
R. JAMES ABERNATHEY,
in "The American Miller."

WILLIAM TELL FLOUR is made from the finest specially selected OHIO Red Winter Wheat. President John W. Burk, who personally inspects the wheat offered for this famous flour, has an experience of 45 years at the business. Every shipment of grain must come up to the long established William Tell standard in every respect.

Ask any expert. He will tell you that the whitest—most delicious bread—the lightest biscuits, the kind that melt in your mouth—are made from the flour of this wheat. That's the only kind that goes into—

SAYS ALBERTA LAND IS CHEAP.

Another Visitor Comments on Southern Alberta Opportunities.

In common with the many visitors who came to Lethbridge, Dr. Shields, of Dakota, who is spending a short time in this district remarked that he was delighted at the appearance of the city and district. Mr. Shields has already invested to some extent in Southern Alberta lands and is going to invest some more.

"The Southern Alberta lands are the best thing anywhere," he remarked. Mr. Shields went into Dakota when land was as cheap as it is in some places in Alberta now and at present he states that you can't touch it with less than fifty or sixty dollars an acre and land that will raise wheat like is being raised here, is sure to reach even higher figures than that. In Dakota Mr. Shields remarked land was reckoned to be worth twice as many dollars as it will grow bushels of wheat per acre.—Lethbridge, Alberta Daily Herald.

How It Happened.

"How's this?" remarked the tall office boy with the newspaper. "Here is where an educated monkey ran a sewing machine."

"Aw, that's nothing," sneered the short office boy. "Yesterday I saw a mouse run a typewriter."

"Come off! What are you giving me? Where did this happen?"

"Right in the old man's office. The mouse came from under the desk and made for the pretty typewriter, and she's running yet."

Two Different Causes.

"Oh, dear!" sighed the pretty heiress. "I'm so awfully miserable!"

"Why are you miserable?" queried the maid who was both homely and penniless.

"I'm afraid some one will marry me for my money," answered the pretty heiress.

"And I," rejoined the poor girl, "am miserable because I'm afraid no one will marry me because I haven't any money."

THE HOME CIRCLE.

Pleasant Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as they Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

Editor's Note.—It is our desire to make this department one of the most interesting and valuable features of the whole paper. To this end we ask the assistance of our readers. Choice verse and gems of thought will be gladly received. Here are our thanks for anything that our friends have sent or may send.

The greatest of all pleasures is to give pleasure to one whom we love.

What is necessary to change a house into a home? If you know, attend to it at once.

* * *

How many people would be willing to write the secret thoughts of one day on a blackboard?

Are you always ready to distribute good cheer, sweet thoughts and tender remembrances?

* * *

The most sacred thing beneath the Cross of Christ is the heart of a pure woman. She is God's last and best gift to man."

The world would be happier if the people were a little more generous with their praise. There is too much flattery, but a word of just appreciation would cheer the heart and strengthen the hands of many a discouraged worker in the home, in the school, in the church and in the world.

You may be broad as humanity in your friendliness for man. There is nothing to lose and much to be gained by greeting the world with a smile and a grasp of sympathy. But be sincere. Let not so holy a thing as the spirit of friendship, even in its broader application, be desecrated by hypocrisy. Count yourself a friend to all men, though but one man be your friend. Live your lives thus generously; a word of cheer to the discouraged; a hand held out to the fallen; a mantle of charity to the fellow who sins—and is caught at it. You will be a bigger man; you will find the world a better place to live in, and you will leave it better than you found it.

Don't torment yourself about what people are going to think about this and that action. No matter what you do or leave undone some one will criticise you severely, and the best rule for getting through life with comparative comfort is, after you have made up your mind as to the propriety and advisability of a certain course, pursue it calmly, without paying the slightest attention to the criticisms of the lookers on from the outside. You see just because they are on the outside they can only see the surface. It does not matter in the least what they think.

If You Were Your Mother.

If you were your mother—

Would you like to have your attention called to your double chin, always a sensitive topic with the woman who takes on flesh with years?

Would you feel merry at heart when your daughter bade you stand up straight? Perhaps the slight stoop of the shoulders has come from carrying many domestic burdens in the days before "Father" was as prosperous as he is today.

Would you like to wash dishes three times a day so that "Daughter" might keep up her piano practice, and then have ragtime and popular songs come floating out to the kitchen instead of scales and exercises?

Would you like the daughter who forgets to send her collars to the laundry, her gloves to be cleaned or her ribbons to be pressed, borrow these little accessories from your own stock of carefully hoarded and really kept raiment?

Would you like to be held responsible for sending Mary's suit to the tailor's, Bess' gloves to the dyer and father's boots to the shoemaker, when each and every one of these individuals pass the aforementioned shops on their way to store or office?

Would you like to hear at regular intervals how beautiful Mrs. Jones sets her table and serves her meals—always with an air of insulting comparison? Perhaps you know that Mrs. Jones has a servant while you have none, or the Jones girls make pretty center pieces and look after the fern dish for their mother.

Would you like to act as alarm clock for the whole family of grown and half grown children, and to receive grunts and growls instead of a cheerful, "Yes, mother," or "Thank you, dear," in return for performing this office? Perhaps you would sometimes feel that your own day would start better if you might lie in bed until breakfast was ready, or that if only Mary would get up ten or fifteen minutes earlier she could [illegible] about the kitchen with you. You see so little of her since she works downtown.

Would you like to have the photographs of your old-time friends packed away in the secretary drawer to make room for the latest stage favorites on the parlor mantel, and the few old-fashioned oil paintings and water colors you prize tucked into the attic? Would you not feel more than ever that you wanted to keep green the memory of friends who were not captious, whose photographs and handiwork bring back the happy days of your own girlhood?

Would you like to be told, when young folks are coming, that you need not bother to dress and put in an appearance? Would you not detect the truth behind this excuse—that your daughters were perhaps a bit ashamed of you, or feared that their friends might be bored by the presence of a chaperon?

Would it not make you very happy if some day the daughter who wonders why your hands look so ill would bring in her manicuring set and gently manipulate your work-worn fingers? Would it not make you look—and feel—younger if the pretty daughter whose daintily waved hair you secretly envy should spend an hour dressing your hair in which the white is beginning to show?

And would you not feel younger and happier and stronger if your daughters and sons introduced you to their friends as a comrade rather than a household drudge?

Look into your dear old mother's face some day, when she is leaning back in her favorite chair and read the answer to these questions in her lined face and drooping shoulders.

Dear Father and Mother,
I'am coming back to home and you,
Unless I'm bidden nay;
I've learned my lesson, served my time,
Since I have been away.
And now if I can only see
The dear old farm and home,
I'll work from morning until night,
With not a wish to roam.
I've seen enough of city life
And gilded halls of sin;
I've drank from out the tempting cup
That holds a snake within.
Thank God! I've killed the reptile now,
And thrown the cup away.
I long to be at home again,
Forever there to stay!"

DAY OF REST AND PLEASURE

Filipinos of Both Sexes Make Sunday a Time of Enjoyment—The Market Women.

It is the women who market the produce. Early each morning long lines of these farmer wives, with great cigars in their mouths and large baskets of wares on their heads, can be seen striding along the narrow trails toward the capital city where market is held, says a Manila correspondent.

Strong and happy, they wade through the streams and the mud, calling out to one another as they go, and only stopping to get a fresh light for their cigars from some one of their number or some one whom they chance to meet. Once at market they chat, smoke, laugh and barter for hours over a few small tomatoes, some green squash, a live chicken, eggs, fruit, sugar or anything they happen to have, and toward noon they straggle home, having had a good visit and sold or exchanged their wares.

Sunday is the one really strenuous day for the Filipinos. It is the big market day when people come from all the surrounding country, and it is the time when cockfights are allowed. Men spend a good share of their time during the week in training their pet roosters, and on Sunday, early and late, they can be seen going to and from the pit, carrying their gamecocks under their arms.

Excitement runs high and their joyous shouts can be heard for a long way. Some women attend the fights, but most of them do the double duty of attending mass and then patronizing the market, which is just across the street from the church. All day Sunday they are active and excitable but the next day they settle back into their quiet, uneventful lives.

SUBTERFUGE NOT A SUCCESS

Crosby Doesn't Know Whether Wife Detected Trick or Really Was in Unselfish Mood.

Crosby had always been inclined to conservatism in household expenses, especially in the matter of his wife's dress bills, relates a writer in the Sunday Magazine. His wife went so far as to say that he was penurious.

She had been in need of a new boa for a long time, and after she hinted that her happiness would never be quite complete till she had one, he at last consented to make the purchase. He went into a store and picked out two, one of which was a cheap imitation affair, and the other a fine expensive one.

Taking them to his office before going home, he changed the price marks, the expensive tag on the cheap boa and vice versa.

His wife examined them for a long time very seriously indeed, and then said, "Now, dear, the expensive boa is a beauty, and it is really very good of you to allow me my choice. Some women would take it without a word; but really I don't think we can afford the more costly one, and besides, dear, I think the cheap one the more stylish too. Why, Cros, dear, what's the matter? Are you ill?"

But dear old Cros had made his getaway into the night where he could kick himself as hard as he felt he deserved. But what he would like to know, is this: Did his wife happen on the more expensive boa by pure accident, or—

Possum Hunting in Queensland.

Among the ways of earning a living in the colony of Queensland the collecting of fur skins combines considerable profit with a fine, adventurous life in the open air in the "bush," the term which describes all country parts, plain, hill and forest away from the settlements.

The possum is protected by the government of Queensland till May 1, on which date young men issue forth for a campaign against the wily animal whose skin makes such beautiful carriage and other rugs and forms the material for ladies' furs all over Europe. Formerly shooting was resorted to, but now trapping is found to be the most efficacious means of securing a good bag. Most of the trappers work in couples or employ a native, and snares of thin wire are used.

The locals got their touch down within five minutes after the first half opened, and several times afterwards had the ball within a few feet of the visitors' goal line, but clever work of the Bridgtons' part saved a high piling of scores against them.

Through the efforts of N. D. Bolster, an addition has been made to the athletic field at the high school. A piece of land has been purchased next south of the schoolhouse lot, 75 feet frontage on Pine street and 450 feet deep. This piece of land has been purchased for $320 by the Paris High School Athletic Association, which association expects to eventually pay for it. The deed runs to the three trustees for the benefit of the association and the money has been borrowed of the Trust Co., a note being given which is endorsed by about thirty interested citizens of the town.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Despite the howl that some of the papers put up about the money expended by the government for increasing the strength of the navy, we notice that they all get quite enthusiastic when a battleship of the United States Navy makes such a splendid showing as did the new North Dakota in her trials on the Rockland course last Thursday. The fastest boat of her class afloat, is the record which she established.

Governor Fernald enjoyed his trip down the Mississippi with the President, congressmen and governors of many other states and is now back on his job again at the Capital. Speaking of the trip he says:

"What impressed me most, was that nearly all the governors and almost every governor from the southern states is a teetotaler. Southern governors are enthusiastic over the results of enforced prohibition, and believe that the issue will soon be national in which event the republicans of the north and the democrats of the south will be a unit against the rum power."

Two Maine heroes were rewarded by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, which made its annual awards last week. They were Charles W. Hammond of Augusta and Linwood E. Clark of Wilton.

Hammond lost his life April 1, 1909, at Sidney in the Kennebec river, and his widow, Edith M. L. Hammond, will receive a silver medal and $20 a month during her life, or until she remarries, and $5 a month additional for each child under sixteen. Hammond attempted to save Archibald Reynolds of Augusta, aged 17. While crossing the river from work, Reynolds broke through the ice in a path which his brother had warned him not to take. Hammond was following about twenty feet behind. Reynolds called to Hammond to help him but the later replied that he could not. Hammond finally threw down his dinner bucket and started for the hole. He broke through and did not rise again as the current was running about three miles an hour and the river about twenty feet deep. Reynolds was finally rescued by his brother who had started to cross the ice further up. Linwood E. Clarke of Wilton, a junior in the arts course at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, was awarded a bronze medal and $2,000 to defray expenses of his education for saving the life of Edgar V. Bump, aged 7, Dec. 23, 1906. Clarke was clerking in a store to raise enough money to continue his education. Fire broke out in a tailoring establishment over the store. Several children were playing in an adjoining room. All were gotten out except Bump. Several men tried to coax him through the flames in the doorway, but he hid under the toy counter. Clarke wrapped a wet towel about his nostrils, crawled on his hands and knees through the dense smoke and felt about the floor until he touched Bump, who was unconscious. He crawled out, having trouble finding his way through the smoke, and carried the lad down stairs. Clarke then hustled around fighting the fire. Clarke contemplates studying medicine at Johns Hopkins university. The case was reported by Lizzie E. Bass.

The awards included about $33,000, 23 silver and 27 bronze medals. Of the fifty heroic acts approved, fourteen of the persons responsible for them, met their death and the nearest relatives received the awards.

The National Geographic Society have examined the records of Commander Robert E. Peary, and are convinced that he reached the North Pole on April 6, 1909, and have awarded him a gold medal for accomplishing the task. The Society stand ready to present Dr. Cook with a similar medal if he proves to their satisfaction that he reached the pole as he claims.

Lucky Bowdoin. She gets $100,000 from the bequests of John Stewart Kennedy of New York. Mr. Kennedy was one of the world's rich men of whom up to the time of his death very little was known. He died at his home in New York, Sunday, October 31, and when his will was probated it was found that he had left the largest single contribution to religious, charitable and educational institutions ever made. His bequests reach the enormous amount of over $25,000,000. Besides this great sum, Mr. Kennedy leaves to his wife, relatives, friends and employes, property to the amount of $5,000,000. It appears that Mr. Kennedy has for years been a contributor of large sums for charitable purposes but has done it in such a quiet way that little has been known about it.

It is significant that German military experts now place the Wright aeroplane far in advance of the other flying contrivances that have been exhibited in Europe. For a time it was supposed that the Wright aeroplane was slower than the other machines, but it has since demonstrated that it is as fast as the others, and far more stable. The latter quality is one that makes success, and the machine that can stay right side up under trying air conditions is the one that will make aerial navigation possible in the near future.

The new overland wireless telegraph record of clear communication between Duluth and New York city, a distance of 1,391 miles, is announced closely upon the heels of the new ocean wireless record reported by the army transport Buford, which exchanged messages with stations on the Pacific coast when four days westward from Honolulu, or 3,500 miles from the American continent. The difference between the two records reveals the strength of the disturbing influences on land, which are more evident in the day than at night, when wireless telegraphing is easier and clear.

Coaling seems to be destined to become a matter of vital importance to warships, not only because of the absolute necessity of the fuel, but because of the dangers which have been revealed by the fact that high explosives have been found in a number of instances, of late, in the coal for the bunkers of British war vessels. Unless coal supplies are closely guarded night and day, and every basket put aboard is closely inspected, it would be comparatively easy to destroy the mightiest of ships with sticks of explosive, properly adjusted in lumps of the fuel. This danger has received more or less consideration during times of war, but never in days of peaceful service have ships been menaced as British cruisers and battleships seem to be at the present time.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has given instructions that packages not properly wrapped will not be accepted for mailing. This action is taken in consequence of many complaints, especially from abroad, that parcels are received in a damaged condition because they are not prepared securely by the senders. The conditions reported illustrate the carelessness in many quarters and the remedy applied should be effective. It is just as easy to tie up a parcel in such a way as to make transmission safe as it is to do the work in a slovenly manner, incurring the risk of loss and of damage to the package and to other contents of the mail pouch. Beyond question the postal authorities have often been blamed for failing to deliver a parcel or for the damage that resulted when the sender was really the one at fault.

Lack of Judgment.

"So Cayenne Charley met his fate at the hands of a posse?"

"Yep," answered Three Fingered Sam.

"What was the trouble?"

"His strongest difficulty was a lack of judgment as to speed. He helped himself to a horse, but didn't pick one that was fast enough to keep ahead of the party he went after him."

VERDICT IS SUSTAINED.

1. Allowing the amendments. We think this was clearly within the discretion of the court.

2. Ruling that even if the authority given to the foreman of the wash room to call men from other rooms to assist, was limited to the pulling by them on the rope, it must be brought to the knowledge of the servant to afford the defendant the benefit of the limitation. This ruling is sustained by the authorities.

The relation of master and servant at the time of the action is not denied, but the defendant contends that there can be no recovery in the action because it is not shown that the deceased was in the exercise of reasonable care, and because the risks of the place were assumed by him as incident to the work.

The place to which he was ordered was dangerous by reason of the small size of the platform, its slippery condition, and open vats being immediately underneath. It was a custom at the mill to borrow men from the various rooms to assist in moving the blow pipe.

"Walczenko was nineteen years old and could not speak English. It is shown by the weight of evidence that he worked but two nights in the particular employment which gave occasion for him to assist in moving the pipe in the wash room, and that no instruction had been given him with reference to the pipe or the dangers in moving it. The pipe occasionally discharged its contents of pulp suddenly, causing it to move quickly. It was sometimes clogged and was then moved by the men pushing with their feet and by pulling on a rope.

"The jury were fully instructed and the conclusion reached by them must have been that the conditions of the place and the nature of the work done were dangerous and were not such risks as the servant by law would be presumed to assume. We think this was justified by the evidence. He was acting in obedience to the order of the defendant's foreman in charge of the room, indicated by motioning and accompanying acts, and he had the right to rely upon the judgment of his superior.

"The question of the servant's contributory negligence is involved somewhat in the want of evidence showing precisely how the accident happened, but the jury may have properly found that the platform was slippery and that the pipe moved suddenly the instant the deceased pushed or was in the act of pushing with his feet, the irregularity not being purely accidental but of usual occurrence.

As bearing upon the claim that the servant's injury was merely the result of the defendant's negligence, we are to consider that the evidence shows that the place was dangerous to one unfamiliar with it. The servant, when called to assist, was not specially informed by the master of the conditions which made it dangerous so as to give him an opportunity to decide whether he would assume the risks incident to the place and work.

"It might be negligence either in not doing what was practical and what persons of ordinary precaution and prudence would have done to render it reasonably safe, or in not notifying the servant of the dangers of which he was unaware. The jury would be justified in finding from the evidence that neither of these duties was fulfilled by the defendant towards the plaintiff's intestate. It was for them to decide and we should not disturb the verdict. Exceptions overruled. Motion overruled.

HAPPENINGS AT THE FAIR.

There was a young fellow named Clair,
Took his girl to the Rumford Band Fair.
They heard the band play
On the very first day,
And he said to his chum,
Who was chewing her gum,
The band plays fine I declare.

A timid old man in the Park,
Was afraid to go out after dark.
As he heard the first note,
He pulled on his coat
And said I am out for a lark.

A penurious sort of a fellow,
To give up his coin, would turn yellow,
But down at the fair
He threw away care,
And said I'll go broke and not bellow.

A dapper young fellow named Bigg,
Took one guess on the weight of the pig.
His guess was quite fair,
But he didn't get there,
So he dug up a half
With a satisfied laugh,
And into the game he did dig.

A quiet old lady named Babbage,
Was sadly in need of a cabbage,
She heard of Mrs. Wiggs, who had raised up a patch,
She went to her door and lifted the latch,
Says she, Is it you that sells cabbage?
Mrs. Wiggs replied, Sure, Mrs. Babbage.

A nervous old fellow, who played in the band,
Could play day and night, so he must have had sand,
He would stick his "Synet" up into the air,
To make people think he "didn't much care,"
But his heart it would flutter, his face would grow red;
Remaining that way 'till ready for bed.
As he came from practice one night rather late,
His wifey says now you must had a date.
The hubby replied with an injured air,
I have practiced hard for this blooming fair.

PURITY REBEKAH LODGE.

On Friday evening occurred the annual meeting of Purity Rebekah Lodge in honor of its Past Noble Grands. A special feature of the evening was the presentation by the Noble Grand, Mrs. F. E. Goding, of a handsome sterling silver pocket book to Mrs. William Britton, a gift from the lodge to show their appreciation of the work Mrs. Britton has done for the good of the order. Mrs. Britton expects to leave Rumford about the last of this month and will be greatly missed in lodge and social events, having been a great worker in all the various organizations with which she was connected. The Past Grands who filled the chairs for the evening were:

N. G., Mrs. Frank Putnam.
V. G., Mrs. R. D. Stratton.
Warden, Miss Eva Eaton.
Conductor, Mrs. A. L. Stanwood.
Chaplin, Mrs. B. M. Woodsum.
Past Grand, Mrs. Kate Peabody.

NO REASON FOR IT.

When Bethel and Rumford Falls Citizens Show the Certain Way Out.

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of diabetes or any kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that they can be cured. Read what a Bethel citizen says:

W. Scott Robertson, Mason St., Bethel, Me., says: "Two or three years ago I had a severe attack of backache. The trouble clung to me for some time and I was unsuccessful in my efforts for relief. A neighbor finally recommended Doan's Kidney Pills, saying that he had been cured through their use. I was so much impressed that I went to W. E. Bosserman's Drug Store and procured a supply. It required but the use of two boxes to remove the pains in my back and restore my kidneys to a normal condition. I have not had any return of kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

GOOD ROADS AID FARMERS

Many Millions of Produce Hauled Over Country Roads of United States at Big Cost.

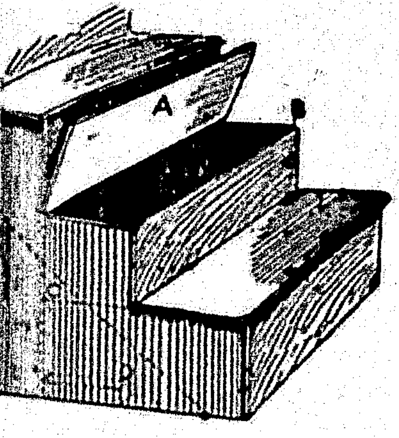
There is no difference among well informed people as to the cost of bad roads; nor is there any longer a question as to where the burden of the cost is most severely felt. There are hauled over the country roads of the United States every year 265,000,000 tons of produce, equal to 30 per cent. of the railway tonnage of the country. The average haul from farm to railway is 9.4 miles and the average cost per ton per mile is between 23 and 25 cents. In Germany over better roads the cost is ten cents per ton per mile at the maximum and seven cents per ton per mile at the minimum. The loss suffered by the American farmer and consumer, figured on the basis of the German wagon road toll, is immense. If it were saved from year to year it would soon constitute a fund sufficient to improve all of the common highways of the country.

L. W. Page, who has collected a great deal of valuable information on this subject, and who talks about road improvement intelligently and reasonably, is not among those who clamor for the federalization of the highways. On the contrary, he deplores the all too prevalent idea that nothing can be done in this country until the federal government puts its hand to the wheel, or its hand into its pocket. The states, in his opinion, should take the initiative, or, at least, prove their sincerity by setting an example for national government.

STAIR STEP FROM SHOE BOX

Illustration Given Herewith Showing Manner in Which the Arrangement May Be Effected.

A handy shoe box can be placed under a stair step in the manner shown in the accompanying illustration. The step A forms the lid of the box which is hinged to the board connecting the two steps. The dotted lines at C show the boards forming one end of the box and D is a small block nailed to the floor to which the end boards are fastened.



Stair Step Shoe Box.

In case the stairs are set against the wall and a banister forms the outer end, about six inches of the step may be left on either side of the end to obviate this difficulty.

FARM HORSE WITHOUT SHOES

Should Be Allowed to Go Without Shoes for at Least Three Months Every Year.

Every farm horse should, if possible, be allowed to go without his shoes at least two or three months every year. In fact, it is hardly necessary to shoe a horse on the farm unless he is to go on the hard roads or work on hard soil where he is required to do much heavy pulling. Without shoes a horse's hoof will grow out and regain its natural shape which is always more or less changed by continuous shoeing. Horses condemned by the street railway companies hoofbound, cracked and otherwise injured have been taken on farms, their shoes pulled off, and turned out to pasture, thoroughly cured within six months. In fact the farmers around the large cities used to find this class of animals a cheap supply, many of which turned out to be first-class horses, showing that all that was needed was rest on the ground without their shoes.

DISK HARROW IS VERY USEFUL

Rapidly Coming Into Vogue as Most Important Tillage Implement in Grain Farming.

The disk harrow is coming into vogue as the most important tillage implement for grain farming. Nothing will conserve more moisture by using it on stubble after harvest and before plowing time than the disk. It may be used as a cultivator for summer fallowing. On ground where small grains are to follow such crops as beets or potatoes the use of the disk will often make plowing unnecessary.

ANCIENT RECKONING OF TIME

Sand Glass Can Be Traced Back 2,000 Years—Rod the Earliest Form of Timepiece.

The art of telling time is as old as the earliest historical records, though the methods employed in dividing up the day into equal periods have varied greatly during the last eras, and only in modern times have watches and clocks as we konw them become customary. Many of these are most elaborate, but practically all possess a circular dial or face. However, only as late as the sixteenth century many watches were oval in shape, and an oblong one with six sides kept splendid time after it had been repaired 90 years later.

Probably the earliest form of timepiece, says Harper's Weekly, was the gnomon, or index rod, of a sundial. At first this was merely an upright stick placed in a sunny spot and measuring the passage of the day by its shadow cast upon the bare earth, because the dial was a later invention.

The sand glass, still frequently used as an indicator for the boiling of eggs, dates back 2,000 years and was always reliable in marking a fixed space of time, such as the hour. It has not been very many years since the hour glass had its particular place on the pulpits in our churches as an ever-present reminder to the preacher not to overtax the attention of his audience. The finer glasses were filled with powdered eggshells thoroughly dried, for this material was not so susceptible to atmospheric moisture.

A still earlier instrument was the clepsydra, which measured time by the efflux of water through a tiny orifice. There were two types of these: In the first the water trickled from a small opening in one vessel and slowly filled a receptacle which was graduated to indicate periods of time, and generally a "floater" pointed out the height of the water on the side of the vessel. In the second variety of this clepsydra the graduated vessel, having a small orifice in the bottom, rested upon a surface of water and gradually filled and sunk at the expiration of the fixed interval.

Crazed by Tall Buildings.

A man who was found half dazed in Madison square, New York, has made the curious statement that though he knew his own name and his house address, he didn't know how to get home, and that for nearly a week he had been in this condition. The interesting feature of the case is that what the man remembered as preceding his amnesia was straining his neck and eyes by looking up from the street first at the Flatiron building and then at the Metropolitan tower. Soon afterward he went into a sort of trance and what he had done while it lasted he did not know.

Now it is a fact that one of the commonest methods of producing hypnosis is to subject the person experimented upon to a slighter but similar strain by holding some bright object just above the level of his eyes and telling him to look at it until a sense of weariness comes on. Usually the hypnotic sleep can thus be soon produced. To be sure, the man of Madison square did not show the ordinary phenomena of hypnosis, but as those phenomena are infinitely varied it is not impossible that he really was a victim of self-suggestion, induced exactly as he said. The question that arises, therefore, is whether other people, when in a susceptible state, are likely to have the same undesirable experience if they stand in the street and "rubber" too long at the skyscraper.

Million-Dollar Housekeeping.

In one hotel of 700 rooms only, the wage bill amounts to $17,000 a week. A big house—that is, one which contains from 1,000 to 1,500 rooms—and the Ansonia apartment hotel in New York has 2,500—will pay out $2,000 a day for food; to feed its thousand or fifteen hundred employes will mean from $500 to $700 to begin with, declares a writer in Everybody's Magazine. Fourteen barrels of flour, 700 dozen eggs, 25 barrels of oysters—the list may also go to indicate the waste there is. A big hotel will burn from 50 to 100 tons of coal a day, winter and summer; for almost as much is required to keep the house cool as to keep it warm. Items that might easily be left out of count—$70,000 a year for music and orchestras, for example—add their astonishing figures. Forty thousand dollars goes to new dishes and $60,000 to new linen. The whole bill for renewals, repairs and redecorations will annually amount to something between $500,000 and $600,000.

The Architecture of Madeira.

We saw no suggestion of modern architecture or European innovation—no blot anywhere, except a single motor car—the only one, I believe, in Funchal. Without knowing anything on the subject, I should say that the architecture of Madeira is a mixture of Spanish and Moorish, like that of Mexico. Only it is better than anything in Mexico. From the ship the stucco, tile-roofed city is flawless; and as we steam away and night comes down and lights break out and become a jeweled necklace along the water's edge, our one regret is that we are leaving it all behind.—From "The Ship-Dwellers," by Albert Bigelow Paine, in Outing Magazine.

A Sad Similarity.

"Do you take exercise enough?" inquired the friend.

"I'm afraid not," answered Miss Cayenne. "Taking exercise is like taking good advice. It is always what some one else ought to do."

On Second Thought, Gambler Decided He Would Not Put the Bishop Out.

The bishop of a southern diocese was once making a missionary journey through Arkansas and the Indian territory, and on his arrival at Natchez he said to the landlord of a hotel, "I have been traveling for a week, day and night, in a mail wagon, and I want a comfortable room."

"Sorry," said the landlord, "but I don't believe there's a vacant room in Natchez; there's a horserace, a Methodist conference and a political convention in the city, and every house is full up. The only thing I can give you is a shake-down." Then observing the bishop's tired face, he added, "The best room in my house is rented to a noted gambler who usually remains out all night and seldom gets in before breakfast. If you will take the risk, you shall have his room; but if he should come in there'll be a row, I'll promise you that."

The bishop decided to take the risk. About four o'clock in the morning the gambler returned and promptly shook the bishop by the arm.

"Get out of here, or I'll put you out!" he shouted.

The bishop, the gentlest of men, raised himself on one elbow, so that it brought the muscles of his arm into full relief.

"My friend," he began quietly, "before you put me out, will you have the kindness to feel of my arm?"

The gambler put his hand on the bishop's arm.

"Stranger," he then said respectfully, "you can stay."—Youth's Companion.

WITH A LITTLE DIPLOMACY

Husband Put an End to Plans That Meant the Breaking Up of His Home.

The romance of a little affair of the heart was completely annihilated by an old-fashioned husband. Some good natured friend, who hoped to throw him into spasms by the startling information, told him that his wife had made preparations to elope, and that she only awaited the first of the month, when he who had promised to be the partner of her flight would arrive with his month's pay, which was needed for traveling expenses. Did that husband rave and tear his hair, go to his wife and on bended knees beg her to remain? No.

Entering her presence, check book in hand, with a lighted cigar in his mouth, he thus calmly addressed her, between the whiffs of smoke: "Emma, I have learned that you have made up your mind to travel, and that you need a little money for railroad fares, etc. Your natural modesty prevented your mentioning the matter to me; or perhaps you wanted to surprise me. Name the amount you require, and I will fill out a check for the sum, and thank the man who has volunteered to act as your escort."

Seeing that he was so willing to get rid of her, she wouldn't gratify him. She is still in the house of her lord and master, a penitent woman.—New York Weekly.

Not Looking for Husbands.

Angered because the impression got abroad that they had organised to get husbands, members of the Forty Widow's association of Berwick, Pa., asked that a statement be made to the general public that they organised solely for social aims and not to get husbands. The fact that they have organized has spread so widely that they are now receiving letters from widows in all sections of the country asking how it is possible to become a member and what is the process by which husbands are obtained for members. Men are also sending scores of letters complimenting the widows on what they believe is intended as a short cut to matrimony. It has been decided to keep the meetings as secret as possible in the future.

Ring Off, Please.

They were seated by the fireside dreaming of the future when they would be one; a winsome telephone girl and her fiance. The small talk finally drifted to the question as to who should light the fire in the morning. It was his opinion that it was the wife's place to get up and start the fire, and let the poor, hard-worked husband rest.

After this declaration there was silence most profound, but only for the space of about half a second; then the girl thrust out her finger encircled by a ring, and murmured sweetly but firmly: "Ring off, please; you have connected with the wrong number."

"Halcyon Days."

The expression "halcyon days" has been handed down to us from the ancient Sicilians. They firmly believed in an old legend that during the seven days preceding and the seven following the winter solstice (December 21) the halcyon, or kingfisher, brooded over her young in a nest afloat on the surface of the water, and that during these 14 days the seas would be calm and safe for the mariner. Hence the name "Halcyon Days," when, according to Milton, "Birds of calm sat brooding on the charmed wave."

Village Gossip.

"Is Squire Whetstone considerate of dumb animals?"

"I don't know how he treats 'em," answered Si Simling. "But he certainly speaks mighty kind of 'em when he's engineerin' a hoss trade."

POOR SPELLING TOO COMMON

Important Branch of Education Seems to Be Neglected in Schools of To-day.

Misspelling among the educated, or the supposedly educated, is apparently on the increase, thanks, it may be, to the passing of the "spelling-bee" and to the crowding of the school curriculum with a multitude of studies unknown and undreamed of by our sturdy ancestors; and thanks also, perhaps, to the present movement for phonetic spelling, which the indolent are tempted to interpret as "spelling as you please."

In a statistical analysis of the spelling of his students, Prof. William B. Bailey of Yale makes some startling revelations. Of 171 essays written by seniors and juniors, only 25 were orthographically correct, while 14 per cent. contained each ten or more misspelled words, and one heterographic genius achieved 31 mistakes of this sort.

There were 443 misspellings in all, and six especially troublesome words were "separate," "superintendent," "governor," "committee," "comptroller," and "privilege," the last masquerading as privalege, privilige, privledge, privelege, priviliridge and privalodge.

Certainly the later years of a course in a great university are not the occasion for remedying the deficiencies of elementary studies in the common schools. Ill fares the school, to latest fads a prey, where courses multiply and the three R's decay.—Dial.

FOUND HIS LANDMARK GONE

Trouble That the Moving of a Trunk Made for Man Who Was Looking for His Room.

The hour one a. m., and all silent along the hall of this sleeping floor in a hotel save for the occasionally heard muffled note of a foghorn, the sound of somebody snoring in one of the rooms, and then presently the sound of somebody moving quietly, almost stealthily, along the long hall, and then under the breath, spoken in a low tone:

"Devil! Where's that trunk?"

And I knew that trunk he was looking for well, for it had been a landmark for me too, standing in the hall outside of one of the rooms. My room was two doors beyond the trunk on the right, and always when I didn't need to look for my number—my room was two doors further on—and apparently he had been doing the same thing.

But now the trunk was gone, and in that long hall there was no landmark for him, and then I heard him moving about quietly, almost stealthily, in the dim light scanning the numbers on the doors, and then I heard him set a key in a lock and open a door and go in somewhere and shut the door behind him, and apparently he had hit the right room, for then again all was still save for the occasionally heard muffled note of that foghorn.

Whistling Trees.

Among the curiosities of tree life is the sofar, or whistling tree of Nubia. When the winds blow over this tree it gives out flutelike sounds, playing away to the wilderness for hours at a time strange, weird melodies. It is the spirit of the dead singing among the branches, the natives say, but the scientific white man says that the sounds are due to a myriad of small holes which an insect bores in the spines of the branches.

The weeping tree of the Canary islands is another arboreal freak. This tree, in the driest weather, will rain down showers from its leaves, and the natives gather up the water from the pool formed at the foot of the trunk and find it pure and fresh. The tree exudes the water from innumerable pores situated at the base of the leaves.

Colors for Houses.

The safe colors for a house, besides red, are white, gray, yellow and brown. Yellow or gray, with white trimmings, suits many a plain pitch-roofed or square colonial house. Grays and browns are good for ugly, nondescript ones; the grays always being pleasanter on the yellower shades than on cold blue tones. White suggests the formal type again. It is a very good color for a country house, showing it up from a distance in fascinating glimpses, for it needs trees about it and flowers to sparkle against its walls. Such a house will be attractive when the leaves are gone from the trees, for the bare boughs will serve to soften the effect.—Scribner's Magazine.

Got Out of His Dilemma.

A new "copper" just appointed and not long over, was put out in Brooklyn. He found a large dead dog at the corner of two streets. He took out his book and wrote: "This morning at 1:15 a. m., I found a dead dog at the corner of——" and he looked up to see what the streets were and discovered they were Keep and Kosciusko.

He studied for a long time. Then he dragged the dog by the tail to the corner of Keep and Kent streets.

In Pittsburg.

The City Editor—Here's a mighty good story about a young fellow who runs away with a chorus girl.

The Night Editor—What's that! A good story? Why, it's been done to death.

The City Editor—This one hasn't. It's an absolute novelty. The young fellow is neither a millionaire nor a Pittsburger!

Why Our Coffees are Richest in Flavor

Caffeone, you know, is the aromatic principle of coffee. This nectar-like oil forms the coffee flavor and fragrance.

Moreover, coffee that is rich in oil is wonderfully wholesome. For caffeone is a germ destroyer of remarkable value.

When you drink "Fifth Avenue" Coffee you insure yourself the maximum amount of this ambrosial oil.

Because only the berries famous for their richness in caffeone are used in our blend. And to develop this essential oil to its utmost, coffee must be roasted as the O'Donohue Coffee Company roasts it.

It must be roasted in closed cylinders over hot coals. It must be roasted for 35 minutes so that every berry is crisp and brown—from kernel to outer shell. Such a coffee is

Fifth Avenue Coffee

New York's Famous Coffee

We spend three times as much money for roasting as is spent for other coffees. But we produce a coffee three times as good. Three times the strength, flavor and healthfulness.

Yet "Fifth Avenue" Coffee costs no more than coffee one-third as good. You may as well have the best.

Avoid Half Roasted Coffees

Other coffees are roasted in perforated cylinders over gas and roasted for only ten or fifteen minutes. Because fuel costs money.

Such coffee is only half roasted. And half roasted coffee is half raw. Only half the flavor-making oil is developed.

That is why ordinary coffee is weak and colorless. That is why it tastes flat and insipid.

You never get the smooth, mellow flavor and subtle delicacy that makes coffee so good in ordinary coffee. "Fifth Avenue" Coffee yields these qualities to the utmost.

O'Donohue's 5th Ave Coffee

You Owe Yourself Fifth Avenue Coffee

"Fifth Avenue" Coffee is packed in air-tight tins. This sealed, dust-proof package insures you the full strength and fine flavor of the choicest coffee you can buy.

Coffee sold from open bins is spoiled coffee. Avoid it. For coffee beans have pores which roasting tends to open. These pores absorb germs and foreign odors.

For your own protection and satisfaction insist upon "Fifth Avenue" Coffee. Then you'll get coffee as good as it can be.

"Because," responded wise Reginald, "with the usual perversity of human nature, people expect them to make good."

Easily Explained.

"Yet in the nature of his business, he is always up against it."

"How is that?"

"He is a wall decorator."

The highest medical authority on foods,
Sir James Crichton Browne, LL.D.—F.R.S.
of London,
gives the best reasons for eating more
Quaker Oats

In an article published in the Youth's Companion of September 23rd, 1909, Dr. Browne, the great medical authority on foods, says, about brain and muscle building—

"There is one kind of food that seems to me of marked value as a food to the brain and to the whole body throughout childhood and adolescence (youth), and that is oatmeal.

"Oats are the most nutritious of all the cereals, being richer in fats, organic phosphorus and lecithins."

He says oatmeal is gaining ground with the well-to-do of Great Britain. He speaks of it as the mainstay of the Scottish laborer's diet and says it produces a big-boned, well-developed, mentally energetic race.

His experiments prove that good oatmeal such as Quaker Oats not only furnishes the best food for the human being, but eating it strengthens and enlarges the thyroid gland—this gland is intimately connected with the nourishing processes of the body.

In conclusion he says—

"It seems probable therefore that the bulk and browniness of the Northerners (meaning the Scotch) has been in some measure due to the stimulation of the thyroid gland by oatmeal porridge in childhood."

The Scotch eat Quaker Oats because it is the best of all oatmeals.

At the close of the playing it was found that Mr. Morse had made the highest score of the evening, but the first prize was given to Mr. A. A. Hall, who had the next best score. Mrs. R. M. Woodsum was presented with a squash because of her low score. Refreshments were served after play was stopped and the party broke up at a rather late hour, after a very jolly evening.

Final disposition was made of the Frank Bradley horse case in the second hearing at the Municipal court room Thursday at 10 o'clock, by the order of the court that the horse should be killed. Attorney Hutchins made a good argument for his client and thought if the animal was destroyed, the State should pay the owner such sum as the court would allow. It was the judgment of the court that the horse would never be of any value. The defense had been that the horse had had good care and it was evident that he had not improved any and the chances that he ever would show any improvement were very small. Therefore the court considered the animal worthless and would allow no damage.

Fifteen ladies from Rumford, went to Dixfield Thursday evening, by team, to accept the invitation of the Dixfield ladies to a whist party, which they were to give in their honor. The ladies from this place report a splendid evening's entertainment. The hall in which they were entertained was beautifully decorated and the use of couches, easy chairs, rugs, etc., made it appear more like a large room in some pleasant home, than a lodge hall. The refreshments served included an astonishing large variety of good things. The prize for the high score of the evening went to Mrs. Cleon Osgood and Mrs. R. M. Woodsum had the next best score and received the second prize. The Dixfield ladies have the thanks of the Rumford ladies for a very pleasant occasion.

All arrangements for the band fair which takes place Thursday and Friday of next week are being rapidly completed. The alarm of fire called the department to Small's hotel at about quarter of eleven Tuesday evening of last week. The fire started in the basement around the furnace and was discovered by one of the lady boarders in the house, who was attracted by the smell of the smoke. It had gained but a slight headway when the fire department arrived and was easily extinguished. It is thought that $150 will cover the damages, and this loss is covered by insurance. At the time of the fire the show in the opera house had just been completed and an unusually large crowd was at the fire within a very short time.

HEART THRILLING GEMS.

DESTINED TO PROVOKE A SMILE, COAX A TEAR, CAUSE A TUG AT THE HEART STRINGS, CAST A GLEAM OF LIGHT INTO THE DARKEST CORNERS AND BRING A THRILL OF JOY INTO EVERY LIFE WHICH THEY TOUCH.

THE DIFFERENCE.

Two workmen, treading their homeward path,
Have paused to rest by chance
At a rustic bridge, where they catch a glimpse
Of a ruined vineclad manse.
One of them gazes with stolid eye
And a heart that feels no thrill,
At the stately ruins; the dying light
That glints o'er the wooded hill,
And touches the turrets with tender glow,
Brings his soul no message—he turns to go.

For the other's eye the scene is wreathed
With the charm of ancient days.
He sees the waves of purple and green,
And amber and gold in the glinting sheen
Of the sunset's fading rays,
And as he looks in the changing light,
Where the shifting shadows play,
Dancing on tower and turret and beam,
Their robes aglow with the moonlight gleam,
While ghosts come out to play;
The air is silvered with falling dew
And a thousand fancies thrill him through.

Ah! these men travel day by day,
The same green path on their homeward way.
They pause to rest in the self same spot,
But one is an artist—and one is not.

Two women stand at a cradle side,
And gaze on a picture fair,
A smiling child, with dark fringed eyes,
Where lurks the deep toned blue of the skies,
And shining, sun touched hair.
One of them sees but a sleeping child,
Clasping a battered doll.
She notes the beauty of form and face,
And the rich effect of the priceless lace
On the carven cradle—that's all.
She kisses the babe as she tarries a while;
Then turns away with a careless smile.

The other gazes with misty eyes,
And the cradle fades away.
Before her stretches the path of life,
With all the peril and toil and strife,
And the dangers of every day.
She sees the tiny form growing strong,
And the tender heart grown cold
In the race for pleasure that ends in pain,
The eager struggle 'twixt loss and gain,
The maddening quest for gold.
And she asks a prayer, "O God, that thou
Would'st keep him ever as pure as now!"

These women stand in the self same place;
They are not unlike in form and face;
They see the same child in a wee white cot;
But one is a mother—and one is not.

AT THE DOOR.

(Eugene Field.)

I thought myself indeed secure,
So fast the door, so firm the lock;
But lo! he toddling comes to lure
My parent ear with timorous knock.

My heart were stone could it withstand
The sweetness of my baby's plea—
That timorous, baby knocking and
"Please let me in, its only me."

I threw aside the unfinished book,
Regardless of its tempting charms,
And opening wide the door, I took
The laughing darling in my arms.

Who knows but in eternity
I, like a truant child, shall wait
The glories of a life to be
Beyond the Heavenly Father's gate.

And will that Heavenly Father heed
The truant's supplicating cry
As at the outer door I plead,
"'Tis I, O Father! only I?"

A happy man or woman is a better thing to find than a five pound note. He or she is a radiating focus of good will, and their entrance into a room is as though another candle had been lighted. We need not care whether they could prove the forty-seventh proposition, they could do a better thing than that, they practically demonstrate the great theorem of The Liveableness of Life.

Robert Louis Stevenson.

WE'VE ALWAYS BEEN PROVIDED FOR.

"Good wife, what are you singing for?
You know we've lost the hay,
And what we'll do with horse and kye
Is more than I can say;
While like as not, with storm and rain,
we'll lose both corn and wheat."
She looked up with a pleasant face, and answered low and sweet:
"There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we
feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and
we shall always be."

He turned around with a sudden gloom.
She said: "Love be at rest;
You cut the grass, worked soon and late, you did your very best—
That was your work; you've not at all
to do with wind and rain,
And do not doubt but you will reap
rich fields of golden grain,
For there's a Heart, and there's a Hand,
we feel but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and
we shall always be."

"That's like a woman's reasoning; we must, because we must."
She softly said: "I reason not, I only
work and trust,
The harvest may redeem the day, keep
heart, what'er betide;
When one door shuts, I've always seen
another open wide.
"There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we
feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and
we shall always be."

He kissed the calm and trustful face,
gone was his restless pain;
She heard him with a cheerful step
go whistling down the lane,
And went about her household tasks
full of a glad content,
Singing to time her busy hands as to
and fro she went:
"There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we
feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and
we shall always be."

Days come and go, 'twas Christmas
tide, and the great fire burned clear;
The farmer said: "Dear wife, it's been a good and happy year.—
The fruit was gain, the surplus corn has bought the hay, you know."
She lifted then a smiling face, and said: "I told you so!
For there's a Heart, and there's a Hand,
we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and
we shall always be."

TWO LITTLE PAIRS OF BOOTS.

Two little pairs of boots, tonight,
Before the fire are drying;
Two little pairs of tired feet
In a trundle bed are lying.
The tracks they left upon the floor
Make me feel much like sighing.

Those little boots with copper toes!
They run the livelong day;
And oftentimes I almost wish
That they were miles away;
So tired am I to hear so oft
Their heavy tramp at play.

They walk about the new-ploughed
ground,
Where mud in plenty lies;
It is rolled up in marbles round,
And baked in little pies;
At night upon the nursery floor
In every shape it dries!

Today I was disposed to scold;
But when I look, tonight,
At those little boots by the fire,
With copper toes so bright,
I think how sad my heart would be
To put them out of sight.

For in a trunk upstairs I've laid
Two socks of white and blue;
If called to put these boots away,
O God! what should I do!
I mourn that there are not, tonight,
Three pairs instead of two.

I mourn because I thought how nice
My neighbor 'cross the way
Could keep her carpets all the year
From getting worn or gray;
Yet well I know she'd smile to own
Some little boots today!

We mothers weary get, and worn,
Over our load of care;
But how we speak to these little ones
Let each of us beware;
For what would our firesides be, tonight,
If no little boots were there!

Miss Pedigree—My family can claim a very high descent.

Miss Dewsitte—Yes, it certainly looks like it had a terrible drop from somewhere.

These women are only a few of thousands of living witnesses of the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. Not one of these women ever received compensation in any form for the use of their names in this advertisement—but are willing that we should refer to them because of the good they may do other suffering women to prove that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a reliable and honest medicine, and that the statements made in our advertisements regarding its merit are the truth and nothing but the truth.

IDEA FROM SAN FRANCISCO

Beef Olives with Vegetables—Good Way to Make Use of Round Steak.

Get a round steak cut very thin, cut into strips four inches and about two inches wide, put bread crumbs in a bowl, add pepper, salt and melted butter. Spread each strip of the steak with the stuffing, roll them up and tie. Put about half a cup of suet in stew pan, when melted throw in the olives, shake over fire until nicely brown, add two tablespoonfuls of flour to the pan and mix well. Dissolve one teaspoonful of beef extract with a pint of boiling water and stir with meat till boiling. Add bay leaf, onion and season. Cover pan, simmer slowly for over an hour. When done remove the strings, put olives in center of meat dish, and arrange vegetables around, strain the sauce over meat, serve with potato croquettes, send to the table at once.

Vegetables.—Cut two or three carrots and white turnips into cubes and boil gently three-quarters of an hour, also a pint of green peas and string beans if liked. If there is not enough of sauce use a little more extract, flour and hot water before taking meat from pan.—San Francisco Chronicle.

WHEN THE CAKE IS BURNED

Harm Done Is Not Irreparable—How It May Easily Be Remedied.

When cakes do the most trying thing to the baker—burn on the sides and bottom—instead of moaning over your loss seek to repair it.

Unless the burn is deep it will not alter the taste of the cake, though perhaps it will be a little drier in consequence. It is so unsightly that it must be covered up at any cost.

Instead of cutting off the edges of the cake with a knife as is usual, try removing the black with a fine grater. This removes all the darker portions and leaves a smooth surface for icing.

Clean, fine sandpaper can be used in the same way. The cake must be handled delicately and not until cold or it will fall and turn soggy.

Ice on the brown side and if burnt on the edges as well as bottom, particularly in small cakes, cover the sides as well as top with icing.

Ribbons of Potatoes.

There is the fashion now of serving potatoes in long ribbons. These are left separate or crossed to form lattice work. They look much daintier for luncheon than the whole vegetable.

Pare, wash and peel half a dozen large potatoes and let them lie in cold water for a few minutes. Cut them up into ribbons, round and round like an apple, and keep the strips of one width.

Don't make them too thin or they will break. Fry them in plenty of hot fat until they are lightly browned. Drain them in a wire sieve and sprinkle a little pepper and salt over them. They should be fried for about eight minutes and served on a very hot dish.

For a Plain Cake.

Cream together two cupfuls of powdered sugar with one large tablespoonful of butter; then add the yolks of three eggs well beaten, then the whites of three eggs well beaten, one cupful of milk, two heaping cupfuls of flour into which has been sifted two teaspoonfuls of baking powder; mix well and add one teaspoonful of lemon flavoring. Bake in a round tin in a slow oven for one hour.

Frosting—Mix one cupful of powdered sugar with enough cream or milk to stiffen, and add a little lemon flavoring.

Cheering Her Up.

Islington, which is no longer rural, was once so esteemed by medical men that they sent their patients there after severe illness. Many also went there in the last stages in the forlorn hope that the invigorating air might restore them to health. A story related by Dr. Abernethy turns on the latter class of visitors. One of his patients engaged some rooms in Islington, and casually remarked to the landlady that the banisters on the staircase were very much broken. "Lor' bless you, mam," said the landlady, "it's no use to mend them, for they always get broken when the undertaker's men bring the coffins downstairs."—London Chronicle.

Intelligence In the Kitchen.

The higher the intelligence and the broader the education of the woman in the kitchen, the greater the pleasure and satisfaction in household duties.

The woman who cooks intelligently is commanding great and mysterious forces of nature. She is an alchemist behind an apron. At her command food constituents that are indigestible, unpalatable and even poisonous, are subjected to chemical changes that render them an epicurean delight. The woman of real intelligence and powers of imagination finds in her well ordered kitchen a source of deep and enduring interest and pleasure.

Holy Days.

Dr. Hale and the late Bishop Huntington of New York were fast friends. The latter had been a Unitarian and his shift caused a sensation. The Episcopalians have saints assigned to the various days in the year. When an Episcopalian minister writes a letter on any day for which there is a saint, he always writes the name of the saint at the close of the letter instead of the date. Bishop Huntington learned all these things quickly, and began to practice them at once. The first time he had occasion to write to his old friend, Dr. Hale, after joining the church, he placed "St. Michael's Day" after his signature. A reply from the doctor came, and after his name he had written in a full, round hand, "Week day."—Christian Register.

What She Hoped.

Miss Cayenne—Why, I thought you were to sail for Europe yesterday!

Callowit—That was me—aw—intention, doncher know, but I—aw—changed me mind at the lawst moment.

Miss Cayenne—Glad to hear it—and I hope you got a better one in the exchange!

An Ordeal.

"Father," said little Rollo, "what is an expert witness?"

"In many cases, my son, an expert witness is a man who is willing, for a consideration, to go on the stand and let the lawyers give him the third degree."

Charitable.

"That is one of the most charitable hats I have ever seen."

"How can a hat be called a charitable hat?"

"You ought to get a look at the face it hides."

Unusual at Least.

"Cold comfort this, isn't it?"

"What is?"

"Wearing wraps in July."

No Hot Air.

The deaf mutes have banqueted
And gone, each hearless her
And talkless him, and none knew who
The banquet speakers were.

Her Idea of Farming.

Husband—Well, I went out to see that little country place we saw advertised and I've made up my mind to buy it.

Wife—Oh, then, we'll move away from the hateful city for good?

Husband—Yes. It's a fine place, but there's only 12 acres of ground, and half of that is covered by a pond of water.

Wife—Say, that will be nice. We can raise pond lilies and watermelons in it.

The "Austrian Lip."

The thick and prominent underlip that has long been characteristic of the house of Hapsburg was dubbed the "Austrian lip" many years ago. This feature was derived from Cymburgis, daughter of Ziemovitz, duke of Masovia, and niece of the then king of Poland. She was noted for her great beauty and unusual strength. The house of Hapsburg owes not a little of its strength of character and [illegible] to this remarkable woman.

Storer Wright is working for Hiram T. Richards on the new dam which is being constructed for the Mexico Water Co.

Another instance of the danger of fooling with fire arms was in the case of Storer Wright, who accidentally shot his wife in the forehead last Sunday. He claims that he did not know the revolver was loaded and in fooling with the weapon it was discharged, the ball glancing along her forehead just under the skin. It surely was a narrow escape and will no doubt be a warning for the future.

FISH DROPPED FROM CLOUDS

Originally Carried Aloft in Waterspout Is Simple Explanation of Occurrence.

On Friday last a number of townspeople taking a walk on the slopes of Knockscalbert hill were surprised to see on the grass near Summerhill a large number of very small fishes, varying in length from 1 1-2 to 2 inches. The fish appeared to be the young of the herring.

In August, 1904, a shower of herring fry was experienced at the head of Longrow, but there was no doubt as to whence the miniature fish had come, for they fell from above on the hats and clothing of several men, and at the time a small black cloud of remarkable density was directly overhead.

The phenomenon of fish falling from the clouds is of more common occurrence than is generally supposed. It is undoubtedly due to some small fry of fishes having been lifted from the water and carried over dry land by what is popularly known as a waterspout.

Many cases are reported from abroad, and they are common in India. Last year Caithness reported a shower of small fishes, which were identified as herring fry, and there was also a similar occurrence in Ross-shire.

Frogs, insects and other living creatures have also been known to be thus transported through the air.—Campbelltown Courier.

GIRL NOT A NATURE STUDENT

She Meant Well, but Evidently Had a Lot to Learn About Care of Birds.

She was not a nature student, and when she saw a sparrow on the sidewalk, evidently too young to fly and too badly frightened even to hop, she did not know exactly what to do for it. She did not know how it had got there, where its parents were or what relief measures would be advisable. All she could do, in her perplexity, was to keep the crowd of boys who had gathered around it from harming it and see if any of these could [illegible] a course of action, for she was well aware that in these days of nature study the veriest infant knows more about birds and their like than many an elder person.

Presently a big boy pushed through the group, looked at the bird kindly, then stopped and took it up. She was much relieved. "Will you take care of it?" she asked him. "Sure!" he responded, with inelegant emphasis. She was anxious that it should have the best of care, so she helpfully suggested, "Better give it a little milk."

The boy stared. Then he grinned. Then he yelled. "Milk!" he roared. "Milk! ha! milk!" Then he streaked up the street, carrying the bird carefully in his hands and derisively ejaculating, "Milk!"

Her face flushed as she went on her way, and she was heard to murmur to herself, "Now, I wonder why he laughed? Very unmannerly, I'm sure."

Dangerous Rubber Bands.

Elastic bands are taboo in a certain large office in New York city, and employes are requested to dispense with the rubbers altogether or to keep them with great circumspection.

The reason for the precaution is that the bands are known to be hardly less slippery than the dreaded banana peel, with the same propensity for causing severe falls, especially in conjunction with the oiled wood floors of modern buildings.

A valued woman employe of the office in question had a severe fall owing to one of these mischief makers, which resulted in an injury to hips and spine which has incapacitated her for all active work for some time to come, if, indeed, it does not prove permanently crippling.

An Anatomical Location.

McMurf met Pleader, the lawyer, not long ago. "Ah," said he, "you're just the man I've been looking for for a week. I went over to your office, but found you'd moved."

"Yes, I'm a block around the corner now," said Pleader. "A dentist has my old place."

"So?" ventured McMurf; "then after this when we want our teeth pulled we'll have to go where we used to get our legs pulled."

LOCAL HISTORY.

The Nobleboro and Damariscotta branch in Lincoln County is one replete with interesting traditions and record facts which comes through Nathaniel Chapman, second child of Edward, who, in 1674, married Mary Wilborn. Nathaniel was a "prodigal" and for a period of some seventeen years he kept his tracks covered—unintentionally, it is presumed—but the writer found him at Kittery, Me., or his tracks on record through which data his descendants were identified. The Nobleboro clan comes down from Edward through Nathaniel and wife, Mary Wilborn; the Bethel tribe through his younger brother, Samuel, a wheelwright and farmer, who was born in 1654, and was executor of Edward's will, paid off the heirs and received the homestead as his own but its exact location has not yet been ascertained though careful search has been made.

Dea. Elbridge Chapman resided where the "Prospect Inn" is seen located at the southeasterly corner of the Common on Bethel Hill and Hon. Robert Andrews Chapman upon the easterly side of the Common where Enoch Foster Esq., resided a spell after the demise of the Hon. Mr. Chapman and where Mrs. William O. Straw now resides and owns the premises. These Chapman brothers were co-partners in trade many years, their place of business being located a little northerly of the residence of the Hon. Mr. Chapman, both buildings being two story, the residence standing front to the road passing between it and the Common and the shop end to the road, both plainly finished when erected and thus appeared fifty odd years ago, and painted white. The shop was destroyed by fire but rebuilt in another locality.

The first house where the "Prospect Inn" is seen, was erected by James Walker, who became a Congregational clergyman, whom I propose to notice further on in another article. He failed in business and his creditors sold the place to Ezra T. Russell, who built the house Dea. Chapman lived in, that was removed by Mr. Francis S. and brother, Wm. H. Chandler, who built the original part of the "Inn." The Russell-Chapman house now stands near the head of Broad street.

The History of Bethel says: "In 1821, Jacob Ellingwood sold to O'Neil W. Robinson the land bordering the Common on the easterly side and Robinson built a house and store on it. In 1835 Robinson sold to Robert A. Chapman and moved to Portland and then to Waterford."

And here I will relate, or insert a clipping from a newspaper of an event that will make the house better remembered in the hereafter and more attractive at this time:

CASUALTY.

"June 1, 1826. We understand that some day last week, Capt O'Neil W. Robinson of Bethel removed a quantity of grain from his store into a chamber of his dwelling house, and while he and family and a hired man were seated at supper, the chamber floor gave way and buried them entirely in the room which they occupied. Fortunately a girl who was passing at the time to an adjoining room gave the alarm and they were immediately extricated from their perilous situation and we are happy to learn, although considerably injured, they are in a fair way of recovery."

When Henry Leland and Charles Jarvis Chapman formed a co-partnership as editors and printers and publishers of

"THE JOURNAL,"

Henry Leland was about fifteen years old and his cousin, Charles Jarvis, about twelve. Henry Leland seems to have been possessed with less love for notoriety than his cousin, Charles Jarvis, and the name of "Eureka" appears as editor, but Dr. Nathaniel T. True states in his well known hand that the "Journal's editor divested of its nom de plume, was no other than Henry Leland Chapman, now Prof. Chapman of Bowdoin College. They converted a cheese press into a machine for printing and thus made the "newspaper," copies put upon the market at "one cent each" which would readily sell today at twenty-five cents or more. These facts would not now be known but for the "give away" of Dr. True who minuted upon the margin of the copy now before me, the real name of the editor.

Dr. True was editing the "Bethel Courier" at the time. The allusion by the "Journal" editor to the poetical effusions of Dr. True is amusing to a high degree at this date, fifty years later, showing the truthfulness of the saying "two of a trade never agree."

The copy of the "Journal" before me is No. 10, Vol I, and is dated Sept. 11, but has no date of the year it was issued.

The "Courier" made its bow to the public, Dec. 13, 1858, and retired July 5, 1861. Dr. True has left a statement that the stray copy of the "Journal" now before me, appeared the year the "Courier" retired. The facsimile appearing in this issue of the Citizen will be perused undoubtedly with much pleasure by the elderly people of Bethel who read the Citizen, and remember very favorably the editor and publisher.

The Thief Who Detected Himself.

Concluded.

"Yes, sir, you did," was the prompt reply of the merchant.

"Me, sir! How do you know that?" replied the man, covered with confusion.

"Why, sir, no one but you and I know anything of the matter. I have never mentioned it, and had you not stolen it, you could have known nothing about it."

Confounded, the thief made no reply. The merchant stepped to his desk, drew out an old account of some fifty dollars, and adding to it, the price of the pork, he told him to pay that bill or he would expose him. The bill was paid, and the guilty man went home with shame and chagrin. We close as we began, by saying to the reader, as the best moral to our story, "be sure your sins will find you out."

War. Murder upon a small scale—oh! that is not good. Why? Because we see men hanged for it. Murder on a large scale—oh! that is most excellent. Why? we have seen men crowned for it.

Although every man of common sense knows that an hour is daily wasted, yet very few seem to know that [illegible] minutes make an hour.

KNOTTY QUESTIONS.

If you can find the drop of rain
That yesterday fell in the main;
If you can see how visions creep
Upon the pillows of our sleep
If you can tell why some men love
The sunshine, some the shady
groves;
Some women have their eye of blue
Some of the sparkling coal black hue
If you can tell why fish that lave
Forever in the briny wave
Are fresh as all the world well
knows,
While oysters that in sea repose
Are salt—why then I say, good man
You'll tell much more than wise men can.

A numbskull exquisite at an evening party, a short time since, attempted to be witty. After playing off his jokes for some time, unintentionally, to his own apparent satisfaction and the no small annoyance of the company, a lamp half filled with oil, attracted the wit's attention, upon which, addressing a young lady, with whose high qualities Sir Fopling was unacquainted, he facetiously made the following conundrum. "Can you tell me, Susan, why that lamp is like me?" "Because," replied Susan, "its half fool—half full."

MISCELLANEOUS.

Our readers will observe that we have enlarged considerably this week. We hope and trust, that we shall receive a good share of public patronage to sustain our undertaking, as the publisher has been to some trouble, and inconvenience, in order to give the readers of the Journal a little larger paper.

We intend to make the Journal an interesting paper, and a welcome visitor, to all, especially to the young.

We shall be happy to receive short communications from any who may be disposed to give us either prose or poetry.

The Editor of the Courier in his last number, comforts himself with the assurance that all great poets, in common with himself, have been roughly treated by the world. What a pity that some one can not be found, who has soul enough to appreciate his poetry, and sympathize with him. Alas! we fear Mr. Courier that such an one can not be found. About that horse, we will say that we have got him safely stabled, where we trust he will not disturb the Editor of the Courier by his limping propensities. That date was a mistake of our P. D.

Sensible advice. If you ever marry, said a Roman Consul to his fore breakfast; and sense enough judgment enough to superintend
the getting of a meal of victuals;
taste enough to dress herself;
pride enough to wash her face be-son, let it be to a woman who has to hold her tongue when she has nothing to say.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Considering the age of the juveniles, and means of performing the mechanical part of the undertaking, the specimen copy here presented reflects much ability in brains as well as mechanical work and furnishes another illustration where the "child is father to the man."

Under the heading of "Enigma" "P S C" undoubtedly stands for Bethel's respected citizen, Mr. Francis S. Chandler, then identified with his brother, William H. of the old "Bethel House" destroyed by fire in 1863, also the "Block" where they had a grocery store.

S. RUSSELL & CO represents Mrs Abby A. and Susanna Russell, who kept a millinery establishment upon the easterly side of the Common. The last named became the wife of Edward H. Merrill, a commission merchant of Portland, where a daughter resides, who is the wife of Edward A. Hay, an apothecary. The other partner married and resided in Paris, Me.

Little Howard Freeman ran a toy printing press and manufactured cards of various styles. He was an orphan, resided with the Hastings, a musical character, who, at the age of fourteen, went to the war of the States, as drummer.

It seems the "Journal" had a full fledged office from the initials of "P. D." appearing at the end of the little editorial—meaning the office had a "Printer's Devil" who was accountable for the editor's mistakes, and was an important character in a printing office fifty years ago.

Hon. Charles Jarvis Chapman, merchant, banker and politician of Portland, who served the city in the lower branches of the municipal government there as chief magistrate, appears in the history of Bethel with a half-tone cut, as does Prof. Henry Leland Chapman of Bowdoin College. A notice of him which has gone the rounds of our State news papers, the present year, reads as follows:

"In commemoration of 40 years of service, the Bowdoin college faculty tendered a reception and banquet to Prof. Henry Leland Chapman of the chair of English literature at the hotel Eagle, Saturday evening, May 8. Prof. Chapman was born at Bethel, Me., July 26, 1845, and prepared for college at Gorham Academy and entered Bowdoin in 1862. He was graduated in 1866 with Phi Beta Kappa honors. From 1866 to 1869 he studied theology at the Bangor seminary and at the completion of his course became tutor in Latin and mathematics at Bowdoin. In 1870 he was promoted to an instructorship and in 1872 was made professor of Latin. In 1875 he was elected to the Edward Little professorship of rhetoric and oratory and in 1897 professor of English language and literature. In 1884-5 he was acting president of the college. In 1899 the college conferred upon him the degree of doctor of divinity and in 1909 the degree of doctor of laws. Prof. Chapman has had a longer period of service than any other member of the faculty. Prof. [illegible] C. Robinson has been connected with the college for 35 years, Prof. Henry Johnson for 32, Prof. George T. Little for 27 and Prof. William A. Moody for 25."

TUBERCULOSIS BEING WIPED OUT.

One Institution or Organization Being Established Every Day.

During the year that has passed since the International Congress on Tuberculosis met at Washington, one new institution or organization for the treatment or prevention of tuberculosis has been established every day, Sundays and holidays included, according to a bulletin of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Fifteen new beds in hospitals or sanatoria have been provided also for every day of the year.

A year ago the rate of increase was one organization or institution every other day, only one-half as fast as now. Less than a year ago there were 40 consumptives for every hospital bed provided. Today the number has been reduced to [illegible]. Nearly [illegible] beds are now provided in [illegible] institutions for the treatment of consumption, an increase of over [illegible]. The number of special tuberculosis dispensaries in the United States has more than doubled, the number of anti-tuberculosis associations has increased 81 per cent. and the number of hospitals and sanatoria 45 per cent.

In one branch of anti-tuberculosis work, particularly emphasized by the International Congress, a signal advance has been made, that is, in the provision of hospital accommodations for advanced cases. In all parts of the country, state and municipal authorities have been urged to provide hospitals for dangerous cases of tuberculosis, with the result that over 1,500 beds have been established in the past year. At the present time there are, however, only 6,500 beds, and 75,000 advanced cases which ought to be in hospitals. Fully 65,000 others could be treated at home, but it would be safer for the community to segregate them in institutions. Every advanced case of tuberculosis is a center from which the disease spreads, and unless the patient is taught how to be careful in his habits, and unless he has the proper home surroundings, he should be in a hospital, where he will not be a menace to others.

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis declares that at least 70,000 more beds in hospitals are needed for advanced cases of consumption. Until these are provided, tuberculosis cannot be wiped out. If everybody in the United States gave $5 to provide hospitals for the dangerous consumptives, sufficient funds would be procured to destroy forever the threat of tuberculosis from this country.

Her Grievance.

"Never mind," said Socrates, "you may disapprove of me, but posterity will lend an attentive ear to my teachings."

"That's what exasperates me!" rejoined Xantippe. "To think a man would go to such length in order to have the last word!"

Excavations for the State House extension began Monday at Augusta. It is expected the foundations will be completed this year so that the work of construction can be pushed ahead in the spring, beginning early in March. Outside accommodations have been secured for some of the offices while the alterations are in progress. The Blaine mansion will be used by the Secretary of State and other State offices will be accommodated in the building formerly used by the Capital Case Co., a four-story wooden structure on the east side of State street, a short distance below the State House.

Its Origin.

"Well, Uncle Joe, did you see where a brave explorer has discovered the North Pole at last?"

"Yessir, and I dunno why folks is making such a fuss about discoverin' the North Pole. Some man must hev planted it fust, mustn't he?"

Catarrh of the Stomach a Prevalent Disease Difficult to Relieve.

A PROMPT AND EFFICIENT REMEDY.

Mr. S. W. Jackson, 315 Weaver Block, Greenville, Ohio, says: "While I was superintendent of construction of J. P. Bender and Bros.' Co., of Hamilton, Ohio, I became entirely unfit for business with catarrh of the stomach.

"A friend called my attention to a remedy for this condition. I began to improve at once. I was soon able to return to my former profession.

"It would require many pages to describe the condition I was in and the relief I have obtained."

Here is another case. Officer George Y. Stout, 724 North Broadway, Baltimore, Md., says: "I suffered very much with catarrh of the stomach and nervous indigestion. I lost fifty pounds in four months.

"A friend called my attention to a remedy, which I used, and gradually got well. I have gained half my lost weight back again."

Chronic Stomach Trouble.

Mr. Robert J. Gillespie, 636 South Main St., Los Angeles, Cal., secretary of Lather's International Union, was also suffering from catarrh of the stomach a long time. He grew thinner and paler, lost all ambition and appetite. Sick at the stomach, indigestion continually.

A friend also called his attention to a remedy, which brought about a decided improvement. After continuing the use of the remedy for a month, he considers himself permanently relieved.

Now, once more. Mr. Christian Hofman, Slatington, Pa., says he suffered for many years with catarrh of the stomach. It produced a miserable cough, day and night. He tried doctors and many remedies. At last his attention was called to a remedy, the same remedy that relieved the others which have been referred to above. He claims that he was entirely rid of his stomach difficulty.

Pe-ru-na Brought Back Health.

What was the remedy that has wrought this remarkable relief? So far, the remedy has not been mentioned.

If any one doubts the correctness of these statements it is very easy to verify them by writing to the people whose names have been given, enclosing a stamp for reply.

The remedy is within the reach of every one. It is simply the good, old standard reliable remedy known as Peruna.

If the truth were known, the probabilities are that Peruna has relieved as many cases of catarrh of the stomach as any other popular remedy in existence. We have a great many unsolicited testimonials from all parts of the United States, declaring in strong and enthusiastic terms that Peruna has entirely relieved them of catarrh of the stomach, that they were wretched and miserable beyond words, but Peruna has restored them to health, vigor and happiness.

These are the facts. Now, if you have stomach difficulty, it is up to you to act upon them or ignore them, as you please.

Symptoms of Stomach Catarrh.

"The affection may result from errors in diet, or the use of alcohol. The excessive use of tobacco, especially when the juice or the leaves are swallowed, is likely to cause it.

"Highly seasoned or coarse, irritating foods, sometimes induce the disease.

"As chronic gastritis (catarrh of the stomach) is essentially a secondary affection, one of the primary causes is an unhealthy state of the mouth, nose or throat, such as bad teeth or catarrh of the nose (ozena).

"The patients are usually poorly nourished, pale, sallow, thin, fatigue easily induced, muscles flabby. Loss of appetite or capricious appetite.

"The tongue is usually coated brownish gray. Cankered mouth is a common occurrence.

"Pain is not common. When present it is usually dull, and is aggravated by food, especially when this is of an irritating character.

"Vomiting may occur in the morning. Also after meals. Sickness to the stomach frequent and persistent.

"Food produces dull headache, and a feeling of general nervous distress. Constipation usually quite marked."

These symptoms, given by Gould and Pyle, coincide exactly with the frequent descriptions Dr. Hartman is receiving from patients all over the United States.

If you have any of these symptoms get a bottle of Peruna. Take a dose before each meal. See if your stomach does not immediately feel better, your appetite improve, your digestion at once resume business.

People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna tablets.

Getting Rid of Them.

Stubb—Why in the world is Cracker devoting so much time to flying those model airships? Does he expect to equal the Wrights?

Penn—No, it's a pet scheme of his. To-day he sent up his wife's dog and it never returned and to-morrow he is going to send up his wife's parrot if a strong wind is blowing.

A Question.

"Are the colors fast in that new tub suit I bought, Jane?"

"That depends on how you look at it, ma'am."

"What do you mean, Jane?"

"Well, when I went to wash it I'd call 'em fast the way them colors ran."

Matter of Business.

Harker—That fellow Bright is playing both ends against the middle from a business point of view.

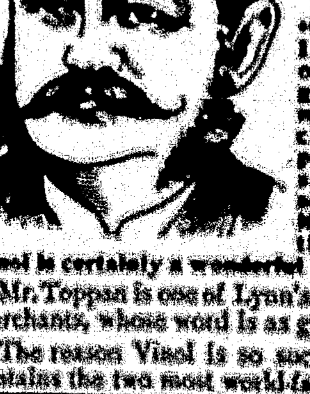
Parker—How's that?

Harker—He operates three pie bakeries and has just put a new cure for indigestion on the market.

The First and the Last.

"How is it that she came to put on so many airs?"

"She went to a finishing school. That was the beginning of it."



WARREN TOPPAN, Lynn, Mass.

Cured of severe compound cold and cough by

Vinol

"From Dec. 20, '08, to March 1, '09, I had three bad colds, one on top of the other. I got so weak I could hardly get around. Nothing seemed to help me until I began to take Vinol. The change was magic. Three bottles completely fixed that compound cold and stopped the terrible cough—and what surprised me most, at the same time it cured me of a severe stomach trouble that has bothered me for 20 years. Vinol is certainly a wonderful medicine."

Mr. Toppan is one of Lynn's most prominent and highly respected merchants, whose word is as good as his bond.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it contains the two most world-famed tonics—the medicinal, strengthening, body-building elements of Cod Liver Oil and Tonic Iron.
